 Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.
 Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending last Saturday was copies, the largest circulation of any daily paper in Vermont outside of Burlington.

5,700

To be in conformity with the colleges, the weather dropped a few degrees to-day.

Of course, the boys and girls will remember, next September, just where they left off to-day.

If sent to-day, your silver contributions to President and Mrs. Taft's silver wedding anniversary will arrive in Washington just in time.

The Socialist congressman from Wisconsin has made his maiden speech in the House—and some people express surprise that the place was not filled with sulphur and brimstone forthwith.

"Anterior poliomyelitis" and "ophthalmia neonatorum" have been added to the list of reportable diseases in Vermont, says the state board of health. Thanks for the semi-information!

Taft is getting the little things out of the way early; thus the announcement of the fifth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving day. Does that conform with the football schedules?

Old Norwich university—all the Vermont colleges are either centenarians or nearly so—sends out the largest class since the military institution was located at Northfield. Thus it is obeying the command, "Forward march!"

Goddard seminary itself is getting to be a very venerable institution, having just passed its 42d commencement. Eight years from now the institution on the hill ought to hold its biggest gathering of alumni and friends. They should keep that date in mind.

It will be welcome news that the death of an aged inmate of the Soldiers' Home in Bennington during a fistie encounter with another inmate was not due to injuries received in the brawl; but the exonerated of his fellow-fighter does not remove the disgrace of an unseemly physical clash between two members of an institution, where such things ought not to have a place.

The loyalty of Barre academy graduates to their old school and its famous principal, Jacob S. Spaulding, is proverbial. Whenever they get together, as in the case of the fiftieth anniversary of three 1861 men yesterday, they stand by the old school. And well they may. The school and its leader had a very large part in the shaping of the destinies of the hundreds who were privileged to attend during the Spaulding regime.

No careless trainmen can be held responsible for the wreck on the Central Vermont railroad at Itherville, P. Q., last Wednesday night when the fireman of the derailed locomotive lost his life. Trainmen have so long been the scapegoats for wrecks and collisions that it is at least a change to be told that the Itherville accident was caused by a herd of cows disputing the right of way with an express train. However, that doesn't speak well for the safeguards which are supposed to be placed for the prevention of just such accidents as this.

There is one class of steamship employees which will not be likely to strike; the companies can depend on that. They are the stewards. Fear of losing a soft chance to mulct the passengers of generous tips will keep the stewards from striking; it is a chance not to be thrown away, for if a steward gets a two-dollar bill from each one of the allotment of passengers assigned to him, in stateroom, in the dining room, on the deck or any place where stewards are supposed to be lying around loose,

Our salesmen are trained to help the train-chasers.

You can get suited here quicker than any other store in town, and get your money back just as quick.

Everything for man's dress for that little vacation.

Special Shirts to match the Suit, $1.00 to 3.00.

It makes a fairly good return on his investment at the end of the trans-oceanic trip. It is the poor seamen who never feel the joy of a tip and who do extremely hard work that are the ones to strike and who are now striking in Europe.

JUST A LITTLE BOAST.

Without undue boasting, we should like to call it to attention that two of the three members of New Hampshire's new public service commission are Vermont-born men, and the third was just unfortunate enough to have been born in Connecticut rather than Vermont. The Vermonters on the commission are Prof. Thomas Wilson Worthen of Dartmouth college, who had the distinction of being born in the town of Thetford and whose wife, by the way, is a Vermont woman, and John E. Benton of Keene, whose native place is Maidstone in Essex county. The appointment of these men is just another indication of what Vermont has done to the upbuilding of other states of the union. Countless other Vermonters are holding official positions in New Hampshire and practically every state of the union. Vermont is proud of them, although naturally sorry that she does not still number them among her citizens and prime movers.

Artificial Lakes in Vermont.

Two splendid illustrations of what can be accomplished in Vermont in the way of artificial lakes are Lake Mansfield in Morrisville and Lake Mansfield in Stowe. The former was designed to furnish power as well as to adorn an already beautiful region, while the latter was intended principally to afford fishing grounds for speckled beauties. Incidentally both these artificial bodies of water demonstrate the possibility of building dams in a host of places in Vermont for the purpose of feeding our numerous streams during dry periods.

We have already referred to the enormous profits to be obtained in Vermont from the storage of "white coal." It has been truly said that artificial lakes and reservoirs in Vermont might be provided in the vicinity of nearly every town lacking waterpower and thus give every community the advantage of waterpower to be transmitted by electricity or applied directly.

Moreover we are impressed by the thought that if New York's millionaires, for example, could be afforded a treat like that enjoyed by the members and guests of the Lake Mansfield Trout club yesterday, they would gladly pay well for the privilege. It is not possible to form a club in all cases for this purpose but it would not be a difficult matter to arrange for the creation of artificial lakes to be stocked with trout as well as to stock existing lakes for the use of parties from New York and elsewhere as a business enterprise, and it would do more to at-
